

MRO Team Member Certification Revocation Policy

To sit for the MRO Team Member certification examination, an individual must meet any Federal, State or Local MRO Team Member requirements that may be current on the date of the examination

Certification shall be valid for the period specified by MROCC at the time of the examination (currently 3 years) so long as the MRO Team Member continues to be eligible to conduct the MRO Team Member functions under any Federal, State or Local regulations and any other individual employer's policies.

Certification shall be revoked if . . .

The individual becomes ineligible to perform MRO Team Member duties. Certification may be revoked following conviction for a criminal offense. All MROCC certified MRO Team Members are responsible for notifying MROCC within 30 days of becoming ineligible to perform MRO Team Member duties, or receiving notice of any adverse action that affects one's ability to function as an MRO Team Member in DOT regulated or Non-regulated drug testing programs.

The Certified MRO Team Member compromises the integrity of the examination by mishandling MROCC testing materials, including but not limited to reproduction or dissemination - in any form - of examination test items.

The individual assists another initial or recertification candidate during an examination by any means that is determined by MROCC as "cheating" or as violating MROCC's Cheating Policy.

MRO Team Members may appeal a certification revocation . . .

Individuals may appeal a certification revocation. Those wishing to appeal the decision must initiate the process in writing within 30 days of the date of notice from MROCC. The appeal, addressed to the MROCC Board, must indicate specific grounds for reconsideration by MROCC.
